A digital media literacy intervention increases discernment between mainstream and false news

Randomised experiment testing a media literacy intervention against a control condition (N = 2055). Participants rated the accuracy of true and false news headlines and reported their sharing intentions; the intervention condition showed improved disce